

Edward T. Clark of Northampton, Mass., secretary to Vice President Coolidge, photographed a few days ago when he went to the Capitol to acquaint himself with his new duties.

© Harris & Ewing

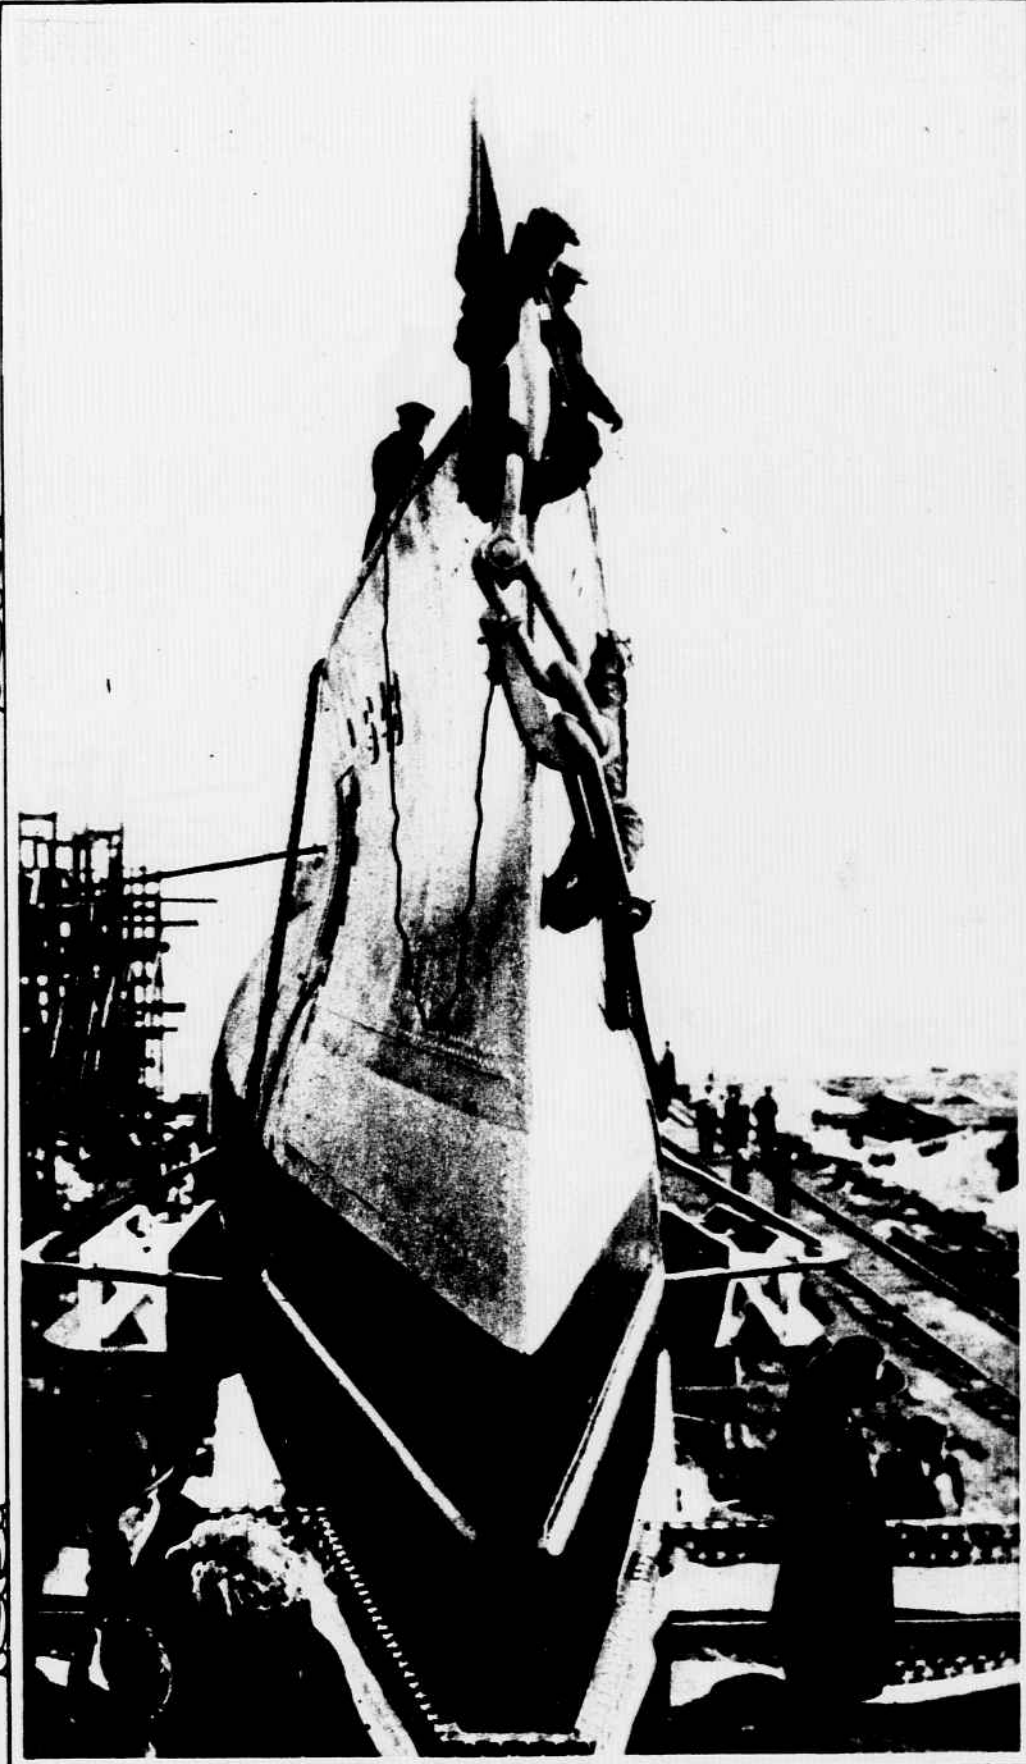

Statue of Gen. Simon Bolivar, liberator of Venezuela, which will be unveiled on April 19 on Bolivar Hill, along the west drive of Central Park, New York. It is the work of S. J. Farnham.

© Keystone View Co.

Senator Lodge, former Vice President Marshall and Senator Underwood at presentation of cup to Mr. Marshall upon his retirement. All members of the Senate contributed toward the handsome gift.

© International Film Service

The S-48, Uncle Sam's newest submarine, launched at Bridgeport, Conn. The boat is double-hulled and so constructed as to withstand a water pressure of 200 feet submergence, with special design against depth charge shock. Her battery consists of five 21-inch torpedo tubes and one four-inch gun.

Wide World photo

Senorita Pepita Grandos, Spanish dancer with "Maytime," in Washington this week.

Photo by Apeda.

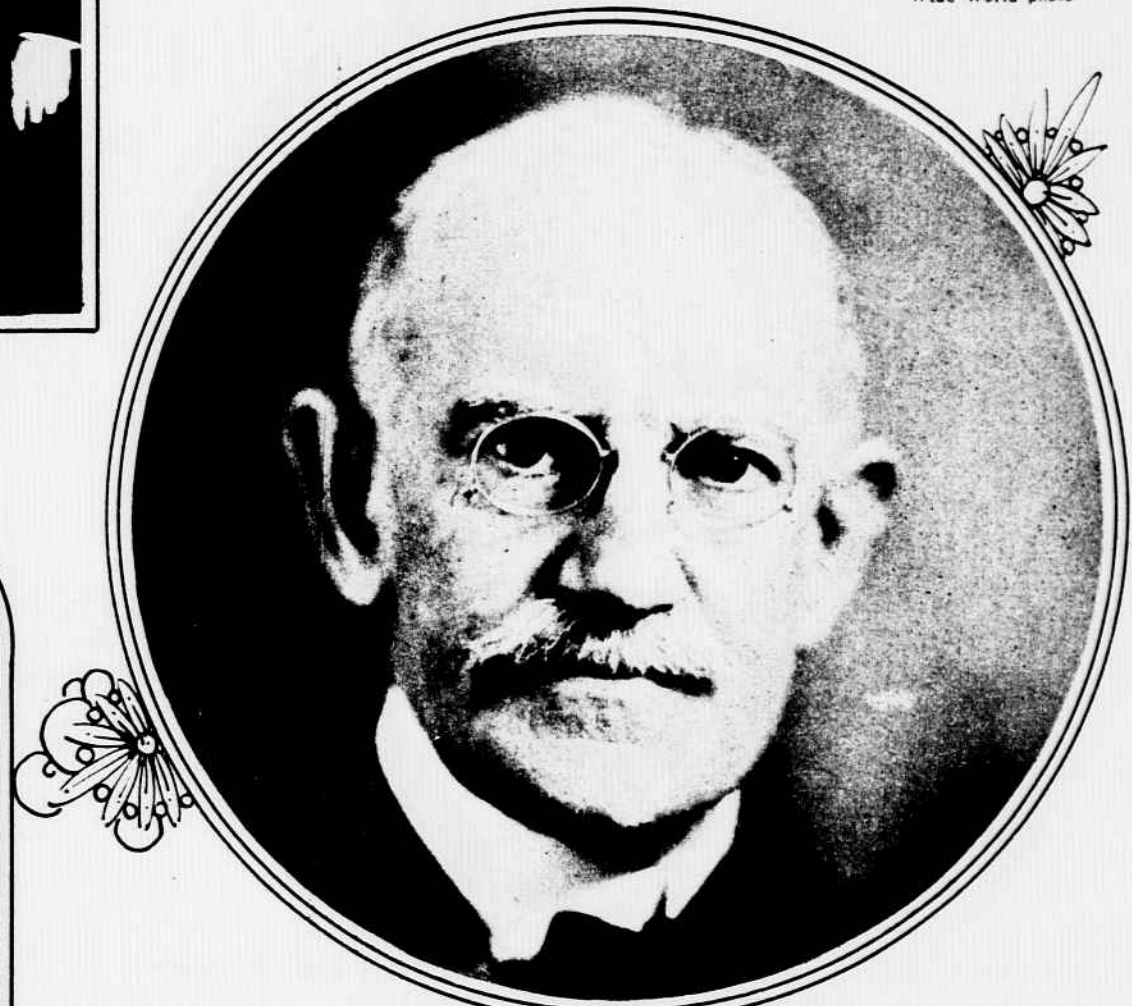

Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the Navy. He fills a position once occupied by his father.

© Underwood & Underwood

Photographed after the elopement. Mr. and Mrs. J. William Souther at Palm Beach. Mrs. Souther, up to a few days ago, was Miss Georgette Cohan. She met young Souther in the south, and the marriage followed closely. Then Daddy George Cohan received the following telegram: "Wave your flag, dad. I've married a Yankee Doodle boy."

International Film Service.

Senator Richard J. Ernst of Covington, Ky., one of the new members who recently arrived in Washington.

© Harris & Ewing

Here's a variety catch which should be appreciated by lovers of deep sea fishing. It was made off the coast of Miami, Fla., by Max Newburger of New York, and contains all sorts of sea animals from a hammerhead shark to a small sea bass.

Wide World Photo